Professional Preparation

- 9/94 – 5/96 Ph.D., Clark University, Worcester, MA. Major: Geography. Dissertation: Capitalism, Modernity, and the Territorial Construction of Ocean Space. Supervisory committee: J. Richard Peet (advisor), Roger Kasperson, David Angel, Janice Thomson, Robert Vitalis.
- 9/90 – 5/94 M.A., Clark University, Worcester, MA. Major: Geography.
- 9/83 – 5/87 B.A., Oberlin College, Oberlin, OH. Major: Politics / Third World Studies. Thesis: Appropriate Technology, Economic Efficiency, and Administrative Autonomy: The Experience of Small-Scale Rural Industries in China. Supervisory committee: Marc Blecher (advisor), Carolyn Watkins. Graduated with honors.

Professional Experience

- 8/03 - present Associate Professor, Department of Geography, College of Social Sciences, Florida State University. In addition to standard teaching, research, and service responsibilities in a doctorate-granting department, from August 2006 through the present I have been serving as Director of the University's Social Science & Public Affairs Living-Learning Community. Promoted to Professor, effective August 2009.

- 8/97 – 7/03 Assistant Professor, Department of Geography, College of Social Sciences, Florida State University. In addition to standard teaching, research, and service responsibilities in a doctorate-granting department, from August 1998 through July 1999 I served as the department's Graduate Admissions Director and from August 1999 through July 2002 I served as Director of Graduate Studies.
- 1/97 – 5/97 Visiting Assistant Professor, Department of Geography, College of Arts and Sciences, Bucknell University, Lewisburg, PA. As a full-time visiting assistant professor serving as a sabbatical replacement hire, I was responsible for teaching three undergraduate courses, two of which were new to the department.

Residential Fellowships

- 9/05 – 6/06 Research Fellow in Other Globalizations, Center for Cultural Studies, University of California, Santa Cruz, Santa Cruz, CA. Responsibilities involved conducting independent research on "Sovereignty, Territory, and Mobility: Alternative Histories and Alternative Futures of Global Divisions and Global Connections" and participating in weekly seminar series.
- 5/05 – 6/05 Arthur and Janet Holzheimer Fellow, Institute for Research in the Humanities and the History of Cartography Project, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Madison, WI. Responsibilities involved conducting independent research on "Origins of the Territorial State in Early Modern Marine Cartography."
- 9/02 – 5/03 Research Fellow, Dorothy and Lewis B. Cullman Center for Scholars and Writers, New York Public Library, New York, NY. Responsibilities involved conducting independent research on "Origins of the Territorial State in Early Modern Marine Cartography" and participating in weekly seminar series.
- 6/02 – 7/02 Short-Term Fellow in the History of Cartography, Newberry Library, Chicago, IL. Responsibilities involved conducting independent research on "Origins of the Territorial State in Early Modern Marine Cartography."
- 7/00 – 8/00 John S. Best Fellow, American Geographical Society Collection, Milwaukee, WI. Responsibilities involved conducting independent research on "Representing Marine Boundaries on Historic Maps."

Honors and Awards

- Honors Thesis Mentor Award, awarded by the Florida State University Office of Undergraduate Studies (March 2008).
- Political Geography Student Paper Award, awarded by the Political Geography Specialty Group of the Association of American Geographers (April 1994).
- Otis P. Starkey Dissertation Research Award, awarded by the Association of American Geographers (February 1993).

RESEARCH

Publications

Books

- Philip E. Steinberg & Rob Shields (eds.). 2008. What Is a City? Rethinking the Urban after Hurricane Katrina. Athens: University of Georgia Press. This book revisits key questions regarding the nature and essence of cities in light of lessons learned from Hurricane Katrina's impact on New Orleans and subsequent efforts taken to rebuild, reform, and restore the city as simultaneously marginal and central within U.S. culture. Reviewed in Augusta (Georgia) Metro Spirit; Choice; and Local Knowledge.
- Stephen D. McDowell, Philip E. Steinberg, & Tami K. Tomasello. 2008. Managing the Infosphere: Governance, Technology, and Cultural Practice in Motion. Philadelphia: Temple University Press. This book explores how the universe of electronic communications is "managed" as a space of communications by focusing on three dimensions of "management": management as design and implementation of protocols and standards (technology); management as control and operation so as to facilitate use, security of investment, and profit generation (governance); and management as acts of coping and response by users, residents, and "navigators" who interpret/assign meanings, affirm identities, and construct communities as they travel through the infosphere (culture). Reviewed in Global Media Journal; Information, Communication, & Society; Journalism & Mass Communication; The Professional Geographer; and Technical Communication.
- Philip E. Steinberg & Kathleen Sherman-Morris. 2005. People in Places: A Documentary Case Study Workbook to Accompany the 8th Edition of The Cultural Landscape by James Rubenstein. Upper Saddle River, NJ: Prentice Hall. This workbook uses documentary case studies to assist professors in bridging the gap between thematic and regional approaches to an introductory human geography course. Designed to be used in conjunction with a standard human geography textbook, the exercises in this workbook help students appreciate how certain geographic phenomena are encountered and reproduced in places, as well as the various problems and choices encountered by "located" individuals around the world. [Note: Although based on the 2004 volume of the same title, this is a substantially different book and is effectively the equivalent of a second edition of the 2004 volume.]
- Philip E. Steinberg & Kathleen Sherman-Morris. 2004. People in Places: A Documentary Case Study Workbook to Accompany the 3rd Edition of Places and Regions in Global Context by Paul Knox and Sallie Marston. Upper Saddle River, NJ: Prentice Hall. This workbook uses documentary case studies to assist professors in bridging the gap between thematic and regional approaches to an introductory human geography course. Designed to be used in conjunction with a standard human geography textbook, the exercises in this workbook help students appreciate how certain geographic phenomena are encountered and reproduced in places, as well as the various problems and choices encountered by "located" individuals around the world.

Philip E. Steinberg. 2001. The Social Construction of the Ocean. 2001. Cambridge, UK: Cambridge University Press. This book traces a 500-year history of uses, regulations, and representations of the deep sea, focusing on how the changing construction of the sea parallels changes in the spatiality of global capitalism. Reviewed in American Journal of Sociology; Antipode; Bollettino della Società Geografica Italiana; Choice; Environment and Planning A; Ethics, Place, and Environment; International Journal of Maritime History; Journal for the Study of British Cultures; Journal of Indian Ocean Studies; Journal of World History; Political Geography; Progress in Human Geography; and Society and Natural Resources.

Journal Articles

Sandra J. Fabiano, Hannes Gerhardt, Philip E. Steinberg, Jeremy Tasch, & Rob Shields. Submitted. Climate Change and Contested Sovereignty in the Arctic. The Annals of the Association of American Geographers. Through a study of the ways in which sovereignty claims are being articulated in a number of Arctic conflicts, this article seeks to engage the Arctic both as a region that is undergoing climate change's most extreme impacts and as a laboratory for understanding how these and similar impacts may modify the spatial organization of political authority across the world.

Phillip Vannini, Godfrey Baldacchino, Lorraine Guay, Philip E. Steinberg, & Stephen Royle. Submitted. Reterritorializing Canada: Arctic Ice's Liquid Modernity and the Imagining of a Canadian Archipelago. Cultural Geographies. This article draws on critical island studies, mobility theory, and the impacts of climate change on everyday uses of Canadian space to reconsider Canada as an archipelagic, rather than continental, nation.

Philip E. Steinberg & Thomas E. Chapman. Submitted. Key West's Conch Republic: Building Affective Sovereignities of Connection. Political Geography. This article uses the example of the Conch Republic, a semi-farcical micro-state that was established in Key West, Florida in 1982, to interrogate political theories wherein sovereignty is understood not as a stable category but as a strategic tool that is employed to improve the environment in which one engages in interactions.

Philip E. Steinberg, Sovereignty, Territory, and the Mapping of Mobility: A View from the Outside. The Annals of the Association of American Geographers, Vol. 99, no. 3, pp. 467-495. Through an analysis of representations of marine space on 591 world maps printed in Europe and the Americas between 1501 and 1800, this article traces the construction of the ocean as an external space of mobility, antithetical to the norm of the territorial state that also was emerging during this era. Publication anticipated in July 2009.

Philip E. Steinberg. 2008. It's so Easy Being Green: Overuse, Underexposure, and the Marine Environmentalist Consensus. Geography Compass, Vol. 2, no. 6, pp. 2080-2096. This article examines the phenomenon of marine environmentalism, from attendance at marine theme parks and harborfront development complexes to policies of the Bush White House, locating the apparent consensus behind marine conservation in a confluence of apparent overuse of the marine environment combined with a lack of everyday interaction with its material nature.

- Philip E. Steinberg. 2006. Calculating Similitude and Difference: John Seller and the “Placing” of English Subjects in a Global Community of Nations. Social and Cultural Geography, Vol. 7, no. 5, pp. 687-707. This article considers the navigational manuals and popular geography books of John Seller, Hydrographer to the King of England from 1671 to 1697, in light of literature on the role of calculation in the material and discursive construction of empire.
- Philip E. Steinberg. 2005. Insularity, Sovereignty, and Statehood: The Representation of Islands on Portolan Charts and the Construction of the Territorial State. Geografiska Annaler B, Vol. 87, no. 4, pp. 253-265. The article posits that the concept of territorial unity and boundedness, which appeared on portolan charts to signify islands as obstacles amidst maritime routes of movement, migrated in the late 16th century to form the basis for representing the emergent concept of the territorial state.
- Philip E. Steinberg & Stephen D. McDowell. 2003. Global Communication and the Post-Statism of Cyberspace: A Spatial Constructivist View. Review of International Political Economy, Vol. 10, no. 2, pp. 196-221. This article considers various theories about the impact of cyberspace on the modern system of territorial states, concluding that cyberspace represents a continuation of ongoing tensions rather than a qualitatively new threat.
- Philip E. Steinberg & Stephen D. McDowell. 2003. Mutiny on the Bandwidth: The Semiotics of Statehood in the Internet Domain Name Registries of Pitcairn Island and Niue. New Media & Society, Vol. 5, no. 1, pp. 47-67. This article examines the marketing and use of the Internet domain registries for Pitcairn Island (.pn) and Niue (.nu) to theorize about the impact of the Internet on state sovereignty.
- Philip E. Steinberg, Andy Walter, & Kathleen Sherman-Morris. 2002. Using the Internet to Integrate Thematic and Regional Approaches in Geographic Education. The Professional Geographer, Vol. 54, no. 3, pp. 332-348. This article discusses how Global Change, Local Places, a distance-learning course developed by the authors and taught at Florida State University, uses Internet technologies to achieve a fusion of regional and thematic geography long sought in geographic education.
- Stephen D. McDowell & Philip E. Steinberg. 2001. Non-State Governance and the Internet: Civil Society and the ICANN. Info: The Journal of Policy, Regulation and Strategy for Telecommunications Information and Media, Vol. 3, no. 4, pp. 279-298. This article examines ICANN, the dominant Internet governance body, in light of theoretical work on the changing relationship between the state and civil society.
- Philip E. Steinberg. 2000. Place, Power, and Paternalism: Imagined Histories and Welfare Capitalism in Burrillville, Rhode Island, 1912-1951. Urban Geography, Vol. 21, no. 3, pp. 237-260. This article demonstrates how an early 20th-century industrialist used ideology-laden investments in the landscape of a Rhode Island mill village to transform the village’s community culture and industry, as well as the subjectivities of the workers, residents, and himself.
- Philip E. Steinberg. 1999. Navigating to Multiple Horizons: Toward a Geography of Ocean-Space. The Professional Geographer, Vol. 51, no. 3, pp. 366-375. This article introduces the idea that the ocean, an arena typically ignored by geographers, is a viable arena for geographic research.

- Philip E. Steinberg. 1999. The Maritime Mystique: Sustainable Development, Capital Mobility, and Nostalgia in the World-Ocean. Environment and Planning D: Society & Space, Vol. 17, no. 4, pp. 403-426. This article analyzes three contemporary images of the ocean (the ocean as empty void, the ocean as a space of exploitable resources, and the ocean as a fragile environment requiring protection) and identifies their origins in the contradictions of postmodern capitalism.
- Philip E. Steinberg & George E. Clark. 1999. Troubled Water? Acquiescence, Conflict, and the Politics of Place in Watershed Management. Political Geography, Vol. 18, no. 4, pp. 477-508. This article examines tensions between the Massachusetts state agency that manages reservoirs serving metropolitan Boston and the residents of rural and exurban central Massachusetts, where the reservoirs are located.
- Philip E. Steinberg. 1999. Lines of Division, Lines of Connection: Stewardship in the World-Ocean. Geographical Review, Vol. 89, no. 2, pp. 254-264. This article investigates the history of line-drawing and territorialization in ocean-space, from the Treaty of Tordesillas (1493) through the present.
- Philip E. Steinberg. 1997. Political Geography and the Environment. Journal of Geography, Vol. 96, no. 2, pp. 113-118. This article suggests how the political study of environmental issues can be integrated into geographic education curricula, emphasizing urban ecology, industrial history, and environmental justice issues.
- Philip E. Steinberg. 1996. Three Historical Systems of Ocean Governance: A Framework for Analyzing the Law of the Sea. World Bulletin, Vol. 12, no. 5/6, pp. 1-19. This article examines three archetypical ocean management regimes: the Mediterranean during the era of the Roman Empire, the Indian Ocean prior to 1498, and Micronesia through the present.
- Dianne E. Rocheleau, Philip E. Steinberg, & Patricia A. Benjamin. 1995. Environment, Development, Crisis, and Crusade: The Imprint of Single Geographies on Separate Realities in Ukambani, Kenya, 1890-1990. World Development, Vol. 23, no. 6, pp. 1037-1051. This article explores the role of “crisis discourse” in the history of land management and population control in a rural region of Kenya.
- Philip E. Steinberg. 1994. Territorial Formation on the Margin: Urban Anti-Planning in Brooklyn. Political Geography, Vol. 13, no. 5, pp. 461-476. This article uses social movement theory to examine the strategies and tactics of a community organization opposing a major urban development in New York City.

Book Chapters

- Philip E. Steinberg & Darren E. Purcell. In press. Power and Space in Electronic Communications. In International Studies Compendium (Robert Denemark, ed.). Oxford: Wiley Blackwell. This is a review essay on the ways in which technology choice and governance regimes in electronic communication impact and reflect state and social power.
- Philip E. Steinberg. In press. Liquid Urbanity: Re-Engineering the City in a Post-Terrestrial World. In Engineering Earth: The Impacts of Mega-Engineering Projects (Stan Brunn & Andy Wood, eds.). Berlin: Springer. This chapter queries the division between land and sea that has historically guided both state territorialization and urban development, and investigates how this distinction may be breaking down amidst climate change and global economic integration.

- Philip E. Steinberg. 2008. What Is a City? Katrina's Answers. In What Is a City? Rethinking the Urban after Hurricane Katrina (Philip E. Steinberg & Rob Shields, eds.). Athens: University of Georgia Press, pp. 3-29. This chapter considers a number of roles that cities play in sustaining cultures and economies, and re-examines these roles in the wake of Hurricane Katrina and its impact on New Orleans.
- Philip E. Steinberg. 2007. Scale in Cyberspace. In AP Human Geography 2007-2008 Professional Development Handbook – Special Focus: Scale. Princeton: The College Board, pp. 28-34. This chapter introduces issues in the governance of cyberspace to spur thinking about the concept of scale as a key organizing principle for geographical analysis.
- Philip E. Steinberg. 2007. Bridging the Florida Keys. In Bridging Islands: The Impact of Fixed Links (Godfrey Baldacchino, ed.). Charlottetown, PEI: Acorn Press, pp. 123-138. This chapter examines the attitudes of residents and tourists in Key West, Florida regarding the island's status as a bridged island, with both a material bridge extending northward to the mainland United States and a metaphorical bridge extending southward to Cuba.
- Norbert Psuty, Philip E. Steinberg, & Dawn Wright. 2004. Coastal and Marine Geography. In Geography in America at the Dawn of the 21st Century (Gary Gaile & Cort Willmott, eds.). New York: Oxford University Press, pp. 314-325. This chapter reviews scholarship in coastal and marine geography during the 1990s.
- Philip E. Steinberg. 1998. Transportation Space: A Fourth Spatial Category for the World-Systems Perspective? In Space and Transport in the World System (Paul Ciccantell & Stephen Bunker, eds.). Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, pp. 19-35. This chapter, in an annual publication of the Political Economy of the World-System section of the American Sociological Association, suggests that transportation-space be considered by world-systems theorists as a unique and critical space of the modern world-system, complementing the standard world-systems spaces of core, semi-periphery, and periphery.
